Following in the footsteps of the thousands of students who have come before, each of us is striving, reaching to find our place in the world, hurdling toward the future. College is a time of perpetual motion. No one ever stands still for very long, whether moving to a new dorm or spending a semester abroad. We put one foot in front of the other, some of us with a clear destination in mind, and many with no idea where they are going or where they will end up.

Sometimes we worry. Everything is moving so quickly. Can we keep up? Yet, in spite of our uncertainty, we always continue to walk forward.

In the true Swarthmore tradition we find ourselves working too hard, doing too many different things, yet somehow enjoying the stress and the challenge. Students come to Swarthmore as scared freshmen. The first year passes in a blur, and suddenly we become sophomores. "How can I keep working this hard for three more years?" we ask ourselves. But we do, and then whoosh! we're upperclassmen, worrying about theses and grad school. Suddenly it is time to leave behind the familiar paths that we have trod for four years and come to love. We are moving on. It is time and we are ready.

Hopefully, this year's Halcyon will be a reminder of a part of the four (sometimes five) year journey we have made through Swarthmore.

Faculty & Administration

“It is important that students bring a certain ragamuffin, barefoot irreverence to their studies; they are not here to worship what is known, but to question it.”

Student Life

“He who finds a new path is a pathfinder, even if the trail has to be found again by others; and he who walks far in advance of his contemporaries is a leader, even though centuries may pass before he is recognized as such and intelligently followed.”

Ibn Khaldun

You must be 21 to consume alcohol in the

The motto on campus used to be "$100,000 and all the beer you can drink." While tuition has gone up, the availability of intoxicants at Swarthmore parties has remained constant. Although Swarthmore hardly has a reputation as a Party School, on any given weekend there were usually two parties per night on campus, in frats, dorms, Tarble, Olde Club, the BCC and the WRC.

Walking into Olde Club parties was like walking into Cheers: you knew the ten people in the room, and they all knew you. Partygoers were treated to a wide variety of music: from ultra-techno at the Sager party to the blaring feedback of nameless grunge bands who blend together in a smoky, flannel-wearing haze.

The new alcohol policy meant that throwing parties was more difficult this year ("Quick! Name two 21 year-olds who can sign this party permit in the next two minutes!"). Aside from the new party permit policy and the phantom party associates, nothing much changed.

Traditionally, Swatties like to get dressed up and get naked. We put on costumes for the ML Halloween party, removed most of our clothing for the Sager party, and found someone else to remove it for us at Green Bottle. In addition, there were various theme parties, including a Willets luau and a Seventies party.

To get a head start on the weekend, some students got smashed at Thursday night Lodge parties, featuring the famous Bluedini, and at Pub Night, an event that Paces resurrected this year.

(Upper left) Sunday morning in Willets: Broken windows, vomit on the floor and garbage cans full of beer bottles made it easy for Willets residents to tell that the campus enjoyed the weekend.

Commonwealth of Pennsylvania

(Middle right) My, what lovely beer you have. Dina Suh shows off her beer at Paces Pub Night. The beer at Pub night was much better than the Milwaukee's Best (a.k.a. Beast) beer served at most parties.

(Bottom right) Wine glasses (but you knew that). Students enjoyed crackers, cheese, and wine at Wine at Wharton. The bartenders were confused and initially tried to stick taps into the boxes of wine.

Swatties welcomed spring with Screw Your Roommate. Roommates set each other up on dates with complete strangers, and made sure that the the screwwees came away with first impressions that were, to say the least, memorable. The night of the dance, Sharples abounded with people screaming, singing, hopping, climbing, flying, and otherwise not participating in ordinary cafeteria activities. Romeo wooed Juliet, Delilah shaved Samson, Peter Cottontail was bagged, and Spiderman fell off the wall. Not all couples met in Sharples: in the middle of Forrest Gump, the Saturday night movie, Amy Hope ran to the front of the PAC yelling "Run, Forrest, run!"

The dance entailed hanging out with people we hardly knew and valiently trying to make conversation (or avoid it by going to see Forrest Gump). Nondancers were set up with dancers, mathematicians were set up with Classics majors, and DU jocks were set up with members of SWIL (well, not really). We saw aspects of campus life we didn't know existed, and met people we had never considered speaking to. Some screws ended up as couples, to the surprise of everyone, and some took great pains to avoid each other for the rest of the semester.

We were shocked, surprised, disgusted, elated, and disappointed all at the same time (sort of like finals). Screw your roommate: truly a Swarthmore experience.

Lower right) Looking lovely: Margaret Cohen, Jorge Ramirez, Elizabeth Hirschfield, Chris Jahnke, and Jen Philpot.

Swarthmore Traditions

(Upper left) O apple, my apple: Swarthmore students have always pondered a lot. Here, Brian Schwartz contemplates the nature of his apple, the nature of the universe, and the nature of himself (not necessarily in that order).

(Upper right) Some call it political action, others call it squabbling over stupid things. It took several weeks and a vote from the student body before Ben Stern and Jeff _____ could raise a flag over Parrish.

Building up and burning down

It is a very common sight on campus: the Borough fire siren sounds, sending firefighters racing to the firehouse with their adrenaline pumping, while students look on in interest and often cheer them on. The student volunteers bike, run, or drive to the firehouse to respond to calls.

Volunteers who progress past their first year of probationary training and evaluation become fully active members of the fire department. They engage in fire suppression, search and rescue operations, and fire education. Within minutes of any call, firefighters arrive at the scene in either fire ("attack") engines or ladder trucks. The high temperature and pressure conditions lead to teamwork and friendship among the students as well as longtime borough residents.

Although most fire calls are for the Borough of Swarthmore and its neighboring communities, this year involved many fire calls on campus, including Parrish, Old Tarble, Wharton, Willets, Beardsley, and DuPont. Fire damage on campus was relatively minor, and the fire department suffered no major injuries.

Room Choosing: Hell in the gymnasium

(Upper right) Scoring a room in Wharton! Joanne Lin looks tense as she makes the decision that will have a huge impact on her junior year.

(Middle right) "You had to turn three copies of the blue form last week if you wanted to do joint tenancy," Myrt Westphal tells Terrill Johnston.

(Lower right) Let the games begin: Alicia Pierce, Noah Daniels, and Cameron Warner wait for their numbers to be called.

Registration: Run away!

(Upper left) We're sure she has a strategy outlined somewhere on that clipboard: Elizabeth Weber moves into the Sharples masses.

(Upper right) "She has no idea which form to turn in," snickers Professor Ted Fernald as a student fumbles with her registration cards.

(Middle right) Zongqi Xia registers for English 10, to be offered in Wharton D306 next year. No--wait--he's choosing a room. Never mind.

Working hard and playing harder

(Upper left) "It sure is a lot hillier here than it is back in Iowa," Pete Balvanz thinks as he bikes through the Crum. "At least I don't have to watch out for pig shit here."

(Upper middle) "I'm leading." "No, I'm leading:" Wendy Cadge and Lisa Ginsburg waltz in the woods.

Believing in the Tide

"It sounds like a cliché, but this was truly a group of kids who believed in each other and played as a team all the way," said Coach Miran proudly of his team. It's true.

While perhaps the scores did not show it, the team was third in rushing offense and defense and played an all around solid game, more so than in recent years.

The Tide is losing four key players and leaders. Mark Fink, Tim Henderson, Dave Reeser, and Eric Williams were the core of the front wall, and will be hard to replace.

The team is already working, according to the coach, "as far as they are concerned, the 1995 season has already begun."

Swarthmore fans, including alumni football players from the Selverian family, cheer the Garnet Tide on. The Tide had a dedicated group of fans that followed them to all games.

Quarterback Pat Straub searches down the field for a receiver before making the pass. The team improved considerably on the offensive this year due to great player effort.

Coach Miran looks out on the field as he gives the quarterback instructions on which play to run next. The coaches felt the team's attitude this year was the best they'd seen yet.

Waiting for the whistle to blow, Swarthmore's center prepares to blow the ball that will start the game against Franklin Marshall. The Garnet Tide beat the Diplomats 21-14.

Sophomore Matt Minero, the team's designated kicker, takes a field goal that would contribute to Swar's winning score. He played in spite of an arm broken early on in the season.

First year cheerleader Elaine Huang cheers the Tide on during a windy game. Although small, the squad's enthusiasm was always a welcome by both the players and the fans.

Krister Johnson battles a rough defender for the ball at an away game against Muhlenberg. Conference games like this one were often intense, with hopes of the NCAA tournament looming.

Concentrating on the ball he has just brought down with a header, Tirian Mink prepares to clear it. The freshmen, who often received playing time all over the field were an asset in both skill and spirit.

Junior Derek Johnson looks on from the bench in concentration as his teammates battle Haverford on the field. The tight-knit team worked together, always providing support both on and off the playing field.

Co-captain and senior Ben Cooke moves aggressively past a Haverford defender to move the ball into the offense. Upperclassmen were a cohesive force, playing key spots on both the offense and defense.

A Team Effort

You can see it on their faces. It doesn't say anything about winning or losing. It doesn't say anything about who scored or who got scored on. As they get off the bus from their road trip, the only thing that matters, the only thing you can read from their smiles, from the way they move and laugh with each other, is that they are a team. They are a team as close as few other teams ever get to be.

Led by co-captains Ben Cook, Nathan Fairman, and Jesse Murphy, who was kept on the sidelines by an early injury, the team never lost hope. They had a season of close losses and glorious wins, the most noted being against Cabrini, whose adamant fans felt the blow of Swat's 1-0 win.

The team stayed in the 11-8 season until the very last. They battled a very rough schedule that included a five hour drive to play Stony Brook, only to find that Stony Brook was away playing at nearby Haverford. They also faced several Division I schools. But they never lost heart, and kept their minds on only one thing: the fact that they were out there to play.

Stretching to catch the cross, goalie Shaun Bundy uses his vertical leap to keep the opposing team from scoring. Efforts like this one provided the Garnet with seven shut-outs in the season.

Jeremy Dittmar prepares to distribute the ball on the Garnet's offensive half in a home match against Gettysburg College. The hard fought conference game ended in disappointment for Swat, ending in a 2-3 overtime loss.

Goalie Kim Killeen stands attentively in the goal waiting for her opponent to take a penalty shot. Kim, a sophomore, shared the goal with senior Mary Catherine Arbor.

Co-captains Mary Catherine Arbor and Bess O'Neill lead the team out onto the field for the last game of the season. Both received All-Centennial Team Honorable Mention awards.

Strong Finish

With fourteen new players coming out for the team this season and only six returning, the women's soccer team knew it would have to make some adjustments in its style of play.

The season started out on a rough note when it lost senior striker Rachel Johnson to a knee injury. However, as the new players adjusted, the team grew stronger.

Swat earned its first victory against Western Maryland and followed it up with a 4-1 beating of Cabrini. Said Goetchus, "That game was [valuable] because a lot of people were seen contributing."

Both the Seven Sisters tournament in September and the October break trip to Virginia helped boost the team's confidence. Both trips served to bond the team and a 4-1 win against Hollins College helped ground the team's positive attitude.

A back and forth game against Bryn Mawr was the catalyst for the rest of the season, which held a 1-0 win against the Fords. Senior co-captain Bess O'Neill scored the last game of the season, while co-captain Mary Catherine Arbour posted an impressive shut-out in the team's finale.

Betsy Rosenbaum, who, as only a First year, received a lot of playing time on Swat's defense, works on a Haverford offender. The defense was key in keeping Swat in control.

Senior Madeleine Fraiser comes in aggressively behind her Haverford opponent to steal the ball. The Swarthmore women beat Haverford this fall for a Hood point.

Pay Off

The field hockey players kicked off their season with a pre-season overseas trip to England. Although putting the great landscape to use during triple practice sessions, the team seemed slow to realize potential against their older British opponents.

However, once the tired team returned to the States the effects of the tough pre-season began to show. The women tallied thirteen wins before their first defeat by Dickinson. The team went on to finish their season with a 15-4 record, making 1995 one of the most successful field hockey seasons in Swat history.

With enough players to field a JV team for the first time, the Garnet had a bench deep with skill, from freshmen and upperclassmen. The Garnet had a more than remarkable season, ending just short of the Centennial league championships.

Competition

Swat's squash team continue to hold its position as one of the most respected in the nation. The team competed with some of the top teams in the nation's lone league. Starting off its season against #4 F&M, Swat showed its potential fending off some of the nation's best players.

Losing its top two players, Hunter Gelbach and Brandt Lincoln, will be tough, but, solid performances from Cam Boyd and Rahul Sakhuja should keep Swarthmore even with its fiercest competitors.

The team's hard work paid off, allowing the dedicated club team to have fun during even its toughest matches. "We go out there confident that we are a competitive team, and that we can give whoever we face a good fight. We go out there to have fun...you can't have fun if you're not competitive. We had fun," said first year student Rahul Sakhuja of his experience with the team.

Jumping Hurdles

Injuries are the dread of every sport, but, the spring and winter track teams were plagued with more than their share this year. They had to battle extreme adversity to meet with success.

Some key athletes were eliminated before the season started. Winter injuries fed into the spring.

Alison Shcirmmer, whose promising cross-country season was marred by injury, "My goal this season is not to be injured." In spite of her caution, she was forced to run the spring season with painful shinsplints. These sorts of obstacles didn't stop the Swat track team though.

First year students made an impressive contribution and pulled the team through some difficult times with the more seasoned runners out of commission due to injury.

As the season drew to a close, with impressive performances in the Centennial League Championships, they looked forward to what would hopefully be an equally great season.

Will to Win

This group of athletes wanted to win. They would take on any challenge. They trained to win, they loved to win. They won.

In spite of the fact that so many of their swimmers were away for the semester, the women's and men's swim teams pulled off records of 11-3 and 9-4, respectively. The team, under Coach Sue Davis' watchful eye, decided to bust open and never look back, and that attitude brought success.

The men broke an impressive eleven records, while the women broke another six. The women's 200 medley relay team, which included Tricia Duncan, Sarah Werneck, Skye Fulkerson, and first year Alice Unger, broke the conference record, as did Fulkerson, two time All-American of 100 and 200 breast stroke, in the 100 breast stroke. Justin Herring was also the first man from Swarthmore to attend the NCAA championships in twenty-one years.

While the coach insisted that wins came from the "will to win" of every swimmer, she affirmed that the team could not have been as successful had there not been excellent first year recruits Carl Sanders, Molly Marino, Alice Unger, and Andy Robbins to replace missing swimmers.

Champions

The Men's basketball season began as a rocky one, but, the team made a strong second semester comeback, finishing with a final record of 13-12. At one point during Centennial Conference play the Garnet strung together six straight wins, leading to a record of better than .500, a feat accomplished by only one other squad since 1955. They finished as co-champions of the league. Needless to say, the men had a good year.

The Garnet was led by a strong core of seniors. Kirk Daulerio was the team's "go to guy" and ended the season as the leading front court scorer and rebounder in the league. Chad Tarr and Jim Foley contributed offensively as well, with Foley as a constant threat outside the three point arc.

The team hit a high point when it captured first place against Washington, a game attended by a record number of fans.

Graduating senior Chad Tarr stretches to get the rebound from his Bear opponent. The three seniors will be missed on the Garnet's offense this upcoming season.

Kirk Daulerio takes a jumper as his teammate Mark Pletcher boxes out for the offensive rebound. Kirk scored his 1000th point during this game against Ursinus.

Second year player Ben Schall up for a jumper and gets his blocked. Many underclassmen the opportunity to see playing and gain experience for the future.

With cheerleaders in the background, Craig Rodner looks across the court for passing options on the offense. The team always has plenty of fans at games to cheer them on.

Sophomore guard Colin Convey looks inside to find a recipient for a post entry pass. The execution of basic offensive plays like this one were key to Garnet scoring success.

In the paint, Pia Houseal prepares to put a shot she rarely missed over a Centennial Conference defender. Pia's strength often left Swarthmore's opponent hurting.

Intent on the basket, Lisl Cochran-Bond sets up for a free throw late in the game. Lisl's consistent shooting helped pull the team through the second half of the season.

Feeling It

Go into a practice session and you walk out impressed. The floor shines with more raw talent than the team has seen in some time. Even still, they did not rely on pure talent; these women worked hard.

In spite of key player Nancy Rosenbaum's early injury, the Garnet started the season off strong and focused. Although the winter break seemed to take away from the rising players, Swat ended well, placing fourth among teams in the Seven Sisters' Tournament, ending within ten points of nationally ranked teams, and, most importantly, beating the Fords three times.

They were physical and dominating as Senior and co-captain Heather Maloney commented, "Our opponents had something to fear, it would be a good fight 'til the end, and, no matter what, they would wake up feeling it."

...ing at her success over the defenders, junior co-captain Emily Walker, follows through with a shot against Ursinus. The Garnet offense is particularly aggressive this season.

Co-captain Nancy Rosenbaum and
 questioningly at the ref as he blows the whistle on the defense. Nancy's aggressiveness often resulted in fouls.

On the offense, Nancy Rosenbaum prepares to drive by a defender with ease. The team often used Nancy's incredible speed and agility to make necessary plays on the offense.

Junior Tanya Wiggins and sophomore Pia Houseal watch on as the team completes a play on the offense. Player support was an essential part of this team's success.

Gaining Respect

Swarthmore's wrestling team enjoyed an exceptional season. With six solid freshmen joining the lineup, this was a building year. They more than doubled the number of victories achieved last year.

Swarthmore trained and wrestled over winter break in Canada. The Montreal Open tournament pitted Swar wrestlers against some of the world's highest-ranked freestyle wrestlers. In spite of this stiff competition, several Swatties placed relatively high in their weight classes. Back at home, Swat participated in a tournament in which their opponents included Duke, MIT, and Williams. Five Swatties finished in the top four spots of their weight classes: senior co-captain Eric Williams, and Pete Balvanz both placed second in their classes. Charles Teplin placed third, as did Alec Stall, and co-captain senior Michael Madden (177) garnered a fourth place ranking.

The season came to a head at the Centennial Conference Championships, held at Gettysburg College. Chaz Teplin won a close match to place third. Stall, up against a Gettysburg wrestler, and Madden, facing a Muhlenburger, both fell in the semifinal match. Freshman, Pete Balvanz took home the lone championship title in a tough climb to the top against the returning conference champion.

At the NCAA Division III Regional Qualifying tournament, the team improved its performance dramatically from last year. In the words of head coach Ronald Tirpak, "We did what we needed to do this year. We went out there and earned some respect. Now next year and the year after that we will cause some damage around the league."

Even Better

The Swarthmore women's lacrosse team, finishing 13-4, ended their best season yet this spring, improving on what they already thought was a good season.

Aside from the skills that came both from returning players and new additions, the team worked well together. Having to move around due to an injury to key player Lia Ernst, everyone rallied to make the season successful. And that it was.

The leadership that came from co-captains Heather Maloney and Julie Noyes, as well as from seniors Madeleine Fraisier and Bess O'Neill, led the team to win the Seven Sisters' Tournament and through their incredible come back against Wellesley, in which the women were down by six with fifteen minutes left in the match, and ended up winning by one.

Both Julie and Madeleine made the first team Regional All-American and Lara Ewens made second team.

Coach Karen Borbee said proudly of her experience with the team, "We had a lot of fun...they are simply a great group of student athletes."

"Let's go play a game," suggests one of the coordinators of the MAGIC program to some of her tutees. Members of MAGIC travelled to a local YMCA where they helped kids with homework, taught computer skills, and played games with them.

CIVIC (Cooperative Involvement of Volunteers in Communities) is the umbrella organization for numerous groups that volunteer in local areas with members of nearby economically disadvantaged communities. Members devote their time to those in need, helping to feed and clothe the homeless, repairing buildings, or tutoring children.

The members of MAGIC (Motivation and Growth in Chester) travel to the YWCA in Chester on weekday afternoons to run a homework enrichment program. They help about 30 Chester children, ranging from first to seventh graders. The kids receive help with their homework, work on individual curriculum projects, use the gym, learn computer skills, and spend Friday afternoons in the pool. The group works cooperatively with Widener University, the YWCA, and the Bethany Baptist Church.

Chester Tutorial is a program in which about 20 Swarthmore students work one-on-one with Chester children who come to the campus once a week. Tutors help the kids with their homework, do arts and crafts, play games, and teach computer skills. Through these interactions, they attempt to establish bonds with the children as "big brothers" and "big sisters."

Serving the Homeless in Philadelphia (SHIP) is a group of students who travel to Philadelphia to serve food and drink to homeless people. They make various trips throughout the semester, and attempt to befriend the people they meet by having conversations about their respective experiences. SHIP also holds numerous food and clothing drives throughout the year.

Participants in the The Winter Break Service Project spend time working in the Kensington area of North Philadelphia, and the Norris square housing project in particular. About 15 students spent one week of this year's winter break there. Among their activities were laying a floor for a Puerto Rican cultural center, cleaning a home for battered women and their children, painting a house, and cleaning a park.

Searching for God at Swarthmore...

From within the confines of an intellectual community, many students join with fellow believers to worship and share common traditions. This year we questioned the place of religion in academia and learned that despite the pressures of a secular world, religion is alive and well at Swarthmore.

Caritas is an interdenominational group of Christians who gather every Sunday for singing and student-led worship or discussions exploring issues of Christian faith. The group sponsors several other programs, including First Sunday Worship Services, Credo (a program in which members of faculty, staff, or the community come to dinner at Sharples to talk about their spiritual lives), and a weekly silent prayer meeting.

The Catholic Campus Ministry involves students, faculty and staff in a variety of activities. Each week, religious services are held on campus, as well as opportunities for small group prayer and Bible study. The group also participates in community service projects in North Philadelphia and Chester and hosts special dinners and other social gatherings.

Swarthmore Christian Fellowship is a non-denominational community of students committed to following the teachings of Jesus Christ. The organization is affiliated with InterVarsity Christian Fellowship.

This past year SCF held a week-long outreach project entitled "Why Jesus? Week." Events included the presentation of a bulletin board in Parrish Parlors, discussion tables at lunch, free Bibles to students who desired them, and three discussions.

Expressing Religious Identity

Ruach is comprised of Jewish students who come together to share their religious traditions. Every Friday night, they cook Shabbat dinner in a kosher kitchen and hold services. Members celebrate the Jewish holidays together and inform the campus of Jewish issues. Ruach also sponsors many speakers and discussions throughout the year.

Unitarian Universalist and Religious Liberals (UURL) is a group of students who meet Sunday mornings to hold a service and student-led discussion or activity. Topics this year included faith, community, prayer, meditation, massage, and Passover. The group has sponsored guest speakers and, during the fall, had a pumpkin painting party with children in Chester.

Academic Groups

(elow) Locked in lab: The women engineers claw at the bars of their cage in Hicks. In four years, perhaps someone will these animals out. Until then, they will paw through late night lab reports and early morning classes.

Many Swarthmore students find themselves with so much overflowing interest in their academic pursuits that they feel the need to participate in special interest clubs. These organizations allow students with similar academic interests to assemble outside of the classroom and learn from each other in informal settings.

The Society of Women Engineers meets regularly and has been known to throw some great parties. They are a group that has been active in raising student awareness of the important roles women have played in the field of engineering.

Swarthmore College Computing Society provides students interested in computer science and technology with the opportunity to explore the expanding world of the "Information Superhighway." SCCS is also a valuable resource for the entire campus because it oversees the dorm computer consultants program and is in charge of maintaining the school's "raptor" internet program.

The Swarthmore branch of IEEE, the Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers, resurged this year with a series of activities. The college's most active engineering society competed in intercollegiate tournaments, established a lecture series, organized for community service, published the Engin Enquirer newsletter, and initiated Swarthmore's best snowball fights! # Exploring New Territory: To Boldly Go...

Students who have hobbies in nontraditional areas have no problem finding organizations at the College to fulfill their varied interests. Those interested in learning handicrafts, how to use a firearm, or how to climb a mountain have found peers who share their interests.

The Mountaineering Club is a group of students who climb wherever and whenever possible. From Fall training sessions on the stone tressle in the crum to a Spring Break trip to Sierra Nevada, beginning and experienced climbers practice their skills side by side. These gung-ho climbers have also been known to scale Sharples walls on occasion.

The Outsiders gather to escape the hustle and bustle of everyday life and instead take the road less travelled. Hiking and backpacking allow these students the opportunity to relax and enjoy the beauty of nature. Often they break free from their academic life to plan excursions and weekend camping trips.

Swarthmore Advocates for Firearm Education and Recreation (SAFER) was formed this year to educate students in the safe operation of firearms by providing them with an opportunity to practice at an indoor firing range. Students may fire any kind of weapon they wish, from a .22 caliber pistol to an AK-47.

The range masters, as well as the SAFER presidents, provide instruction on how to fire the guns safely and accurately. The group is headed by presidents Adam Zaki Rashid and Matthew Lillvis, with Mathew Schenk as a presidential advisor.

Knit Whits, also new this year, holds weekly meetings in which members of the Swarthmore Community can come together and knit. No other club on campus is devoted exclusively to the pursuit of handicrafts.

Members can knit a variety of items such as mittens, hats, scarves, socks, and even sweaters. The knitting club is a place where experienced knitters can perfect their skills and share ideas, as well as a place for beginners to learn the basics of this craft.

Every year new groups have sprung up to cater to the changing interests of Swarthmore students.

Students in Compromising Positions

(Left) "I think this would make a great new club," says Justin Herring as he, Mike Pan, Margaret Cohen, and other members of Student Council review a charter. The Council decided which organizations would benefit the college community.

(Middle left) "I'd like to add something," says Student Council member Seth Harvey as fellow officer Laura Kozek looks on. The Council has been working on a new constitution which would alleviate some of the problems they were having dealing with the many issues and organizations on campus.

(Below) Absorbed in the meeting: Student Council members Jennifer Hayoun, Gilbert Mireles, Rahul Sakhuja, and Alisha Pennix listen intently to the discussion. The Council had the power to approve new organizations on campus.

Any member of the student body wishing to take an active part in college affairs has the opportunity to join various committees. By becoming involved in decision-making committees, they ensure that important issues concerning their peers are dealt with fairly. They help bring special events to campus, and make sure that everything runs smoothly.

Student Council consists of 15 elected members who act as liaisons between the student body and the administration. Seven members sit on joint committees with faculty and staff to inform the administration of the council's activities and to present student issues and concerns to the administration. The Council also charts and oversees the budgets of on-campus organizations.

The Budget Committee consists of approximately 10 members who approve the amount of money allotted to each organization on campus. Since they determine the funding for all student groups and any special events that they sponsor, BC is the most powerful committee on campus.

The Social Affairs Committee (SAC) is responsible for coordinating Swarthmore's social life. They plan free all-campus social events and fund student-planned events. The committee provides an assortment of campus activities throughout the year. This past year's activities included movie night on the lawn, stand-up comedians, a virtual reality game and party, and two formals.

The Movie Committee is a group of students who select the movies shown on weekends on campus. The committee strives to achieve a balance between very recent movies, like the blockbuster Pulp Fiction, and older films like the college classic The Graduate. They try to show a wide variety of movies each semester in order to make as many students as possible as happy as possible.

(Above) Gather round, children, and I'll tell you a story: Mike Pan and Laura Kozek listen intently as provost Jeannie Keith speaks to Student Council about revisions to the Honors Program. Keith answered any questions the student body had about the changes to the program.

What the Puck? Swatties on Ice

The Mother Puckers is a group of students who trek to the Springfield Ice Rink every Thursday night to play pick-up games of hockey. This year, the club was organized and run by Ross Dickson '97, Larry Miller '97, Erik Rosolowsky '98, and Alec Zimmer '97. The participants are divided into four lines of players, ranging from those who learned how to skate before they could walk, to those who had never before been on skates.

Each line is on the ice for five minutes at a time, sometimes looking like a less violent version of the NHL, but more often than not, chasing a small black puck in a messy horde. New members are always welcomed, and in Swarthmore athletic tradition, no experience, skill, money, or equipment is necessary. Whether for stress relief or competitive exercise, physics majors, SWIL member, and volunteer firemen populate the ice rink every Thursday night.

Some arrive with traditional hockey garb and others look like they just rolled out of bed. However, when they wedge themselves into the van screaming "PUCKERRRRRRRRRRRS!!!" into the night air, they certainly appear to be a team. Perhaps they are not your traditional athletes, but puckers are certainly working out something other than their minds at the end of a long week!

"Isn't that your blood puddled on the ice over there?" Terrill Johnston asks fellow Mother Pucker Ben Salter. Although precautions were taken to avoid injuries, some hockey players went home with swollen ankles and cuts.

(Right) Mother Puckers: (Back row) Nick Lehman, Peter Sollins, Alice Unger. Lower right) "Outta my way!" shouts Dave McKechnie as he rushes past Cavan Fleming. The Canadian McKechnie played "A-line" with other experienced players. The A-line players contrasted with the D-line players, who spent most of their games on their backs.

Every Swattie Has A Cause . . .

Swarthmore's Pro-Choice Task Force is a group of students dedicated to preserving and maintaining women's access abortion and other reproductive rights. The Task Force is a very action-oriented group that frequently has educational and letter-writing tables in Parrish Parlours, and helps to escort women and their families into health clinics in Philadelphia on Saturday mornings. The Task force had a very busy year campaigning and working against the Republican-controlled Congress and many aspects of the Contract With America that threaten abortion rights.

Earthlust is a group of students who are very concerned about the state of the environment. The group is in charge of the collection and sorting of recyclable materials on campus, in both dorms and academic buildings. New projects this year included the creation of a compost pile and a campaign to keep the Swarthmore community informed about environmental injustices through their famous "restroom installments" which hung in most bathroom stalls around campus.

Women on the Right is a group of women on campus who hold conservative political ideologies. This discussion-oriented group seeks to inform the Swarthmore community of misconceptions regarding the Right's traditional treatment of women, and how women have played a role in many of this country's conservative political arenas.

Educating the Campus: Listen and Learn

(Way up on top) Remembering the tragedy in El Salvador, students hold a candlelight vigil on the steps of Parrish.

(Above) Read and learn... a Swattie stops in front of a wall in Parrish to read other students' comments about Proposition 187. Articles about the issue were posted on the wall, and students wrote statements for and against the bill.

(Right) "No human is illegal," chant Ana Correales, Solimar Salas, and Heather Fitzgerald as they march in a rally protesting Proposition 187.

Swarthmore students have a national reputation for political activism and awareness. Students' views span the political spectrum, creating a diversity of student opinion and action. Problems of the 1990's, such as welfare reform, homelessness, and the environment, concerned many of the political organizations on campus.

The Tri-College Coalition Against Xenophobia formed in the Fall of 1994 as a result of a sweeping anti-immigration law that California voters passed in November called Proposition 187. CAX was very active in disseminating information to college campuses around the country and served as a model for other anti-xenophobia groups.

CAX organized a rally in Philadelphia in December, held letter writing campaigns throughout the year, and held many information sessions to teach the community about Proposition 187, similar laws, and their consequences.

Swarthmore's branch of Amnesty International campaigned against human rights abuses. Every Friday Amnesty set up a table in Parrish Parlours, where members of the Swarthmore community wrote letters to leaders of governments who unjustly imprisoned and tortured political prisoners of conscience.

Students Advocating Life is a group interested in learning about and discussing alternatives to abortion. Their main interest is to educate the Swarthmore community about the heated issue of abortion and its social, political, and religious consequences.

The Civil Liberties Society had a particularly active year in 1994-95. This group of energetic students organized many informational opportunities for the Swarthmore community regarding civil rights issues such as women's rights, gay/lesbian/bisexual rights, the death penalty and capital punishment, and young people's rights. The group participated in an anti-death penalty march in Philadelphia in October and spent a week trying to raise awareness of the accessibility of campus buildings to disabled people.

The Swarthmore Conservative Union is a group of students interested in raising awareness of conservative political ideologies on campus. They frequently host guest lecturers who discuss such issues as feminism, welfare reform, and affirmative action. The Union also produces a bimonthly newspaper, Common Sense, which provides a forum for conservative political thought.

The Swarthmore College Democrats had a resurgence of energy in 1994. After the November elections in which Republicans won significant victories in both national and local elections, the College Democrats set out to organize themselves and keep watch over the newly elected Republicans.

They held many letter-writing and educational campaigns against the Contract With America, cosponsored political events on campus, and frequently debated hot issues such as welfare, health care, and immigrant rights with members of the Conservative Union. Their goal was to initiate dialogue and pierce through the political apathy that abounds on campus.

Filling the Air with Music . . .

Swarthmore has enough musical groups to suit any musician's taste. Whether you dream of being a jazz singer, having women swoon at your feet as you sing in an all male a capella group, jamming on a sax, or harmonizing in a classical choir performance, there is a place for you to exhibit your talents.

One of the greatest assets to the Swarthmore musical community is the Gospel Choir which was recently featured in the alumni magazine. This group sings traditional gospel music with its own unique style.

Controversy struck Swarthmore's this year when choir director Arne Running chose Bach's St. John's Passion as the choir's spring performance piece. Several Jewish students chose not to sing the piece on the grounds that the portrayal of "the Jewish choir" made the piece anti-semitic. Discussion ensued regarding the history surrounding the piece. Parent's weekend included both the choir's performance and a discussion of the piece where parents asked questions of the director and a religion professor. An all-campus collection was also held to discuss the issue.

A new ensemble, the Pep Band, popped up at football games this fall. This informal collection of musicians added new spirit to Swat sports.

Swarthmore music, however, will never be without the good old basics: classic a capella groups. Grapevine, Sixteen Feet and Mixed Company, Minalo and Mad Wiggles are still campus favorites. This year a new group, Oscar and Emily, sprang into existence, catering to jazz enthusiasts among us. Few will forget Neal Cohen's solo in Ain't Misbehavin' or Julie Hovis' scat at the Fall Jamboree.

The women of Swarthmore College

In an often male-centered world, there are many difficulties that women need to overcome in order to succeed. Women are faced with sexual harassment and assault, as well as more insidious forms of discrimination.

Several recourses for these problems exist at Swarthmore. The Women's Resource Center (WRC) was designed to provide a safe, comfortable place for all women to study, hang out, and research current women's issues. In addition, it has a great kitchen! At various points during the year, students were invited to the WRC to be entertained by their peers who could perform anything they wanted, from poetry to comedy. The WRC recently underwent major changes in its board of directors and mission statement in order to more fully meet the needs of all Swarthmore women.

Friends of Survivors is a group designed to provide support for victims of sexual assault and sexual abuse. This year, they held an informational campaign to raise campus awareness of sexual assault. Signs were posted all over campus declaring "I am a survivor..." followed by statements asserting that life can go on despite such personal tragedies.

This year, the Capstone Seminar for the Women's Studies concentration designed a display illustrating the history of women at Swarthmore. The display included personal items from Swarthmore women faculty and staff, as well as tape and video recordings of interviews with them. There were also documents involving women at Swarthmore in the Phoenix and places where current students could record their impressions of their experiences as women at Swarthmore in the '90's and their opinions of the exhibit.

There are many students at Swarthmore from different ethnic, racial, cultural and religious backgrounds. These students generally coexist peacefully, and often initiate meaningful dialogue in order to promote greater understanding between different groups ("To boldly go where no one has gone before. . ."). Though the campus is still striving to reach a deeper understanding of its sub-communities, Swarthmore is very proud of its achievements thus far. Most of these gains could not have been made without the invaluable networks of support and theatres of discourse provided by the numerous cultural organizations on campus.

There are individual groups for students from all backgrounds, which meet to give students a chance to interact with others with whom they may have more in common. Many of the groups meet in the Intercultural Center, the large community space under Clothier Tower.

SAO is the Swarthmore Asian organization. It holds meetings for Asian students, as well as sponsoring the annual Chinese New Year celebration in Sharples.

SOCA is the group of Students of Caribbean Ancestry. They often work with similar organizations at Haverford and Bryn Mawr.

LBGA is the organization of lesbian, bisexual and gay students. They provide support for students who are insecure in or unsure of their sexuality, and often sponsor dances in Paces, as well as the annual Sager symposium on gay issues.

DESHI is the group which focuses on India and Southeast Asia.

Keeping the crowds in stitches

There are various performance groups consisting of students of different artistic talents. Actors, comedians, and dancers practice their talents and entertain when they share their skills with the college community. However, none of these arts could come to life at Swat without the help of the Drama Board, which provides the means necessary to make theater more accessible.

The board funds productions, works with potential directors to help productions run smoothly, and helps with the practical aspects of finding space and getting technical support for shows. They monitor auditions for all shows, with the intention of making sure that all students are given a fair chance and provide opportunities for first-time as well as more experienced directors in making their visions possible.

Both Vertigo-go and Six Cents (comedy improv groups) are funded through Drama Board, as is Imaginary Gardens (the poetry reading group).

This past year, the drama board invested in a puppetry workshop led over a number of weeks by a professional puppeteer and a similar workshop related to movement, physical expression, and the use of masks in theater work. In addition, they sponsored the Night of Scenes, Shakespeare in the Crum, and an outside performer during AIDS Awareness Week.

Just like that old time...waltz? Reel?

Swarthmore's Folk Dance Club meets twice weekly to learn English, Scottish, and International folk dancing. The Club also sponsors the Parents' Weekend demonstration, trips to folkdancing events, and the Swarthmore English/Scottish Ball.

Few clubs inspire such devotion among their members. Chris Cobb '90 writes: "When dances like these work as they ought, the music and the pattern of the dance pick you up and carry you, levitate you, propel you and the rest of the dancers. We are as much being danced by some lively work of art as we are dancing it."

Students who have a way with words

Hey Swatties! do you feel like you've got too much free time on your hands? Like you're not being intellectually challenged enough? Sure, you write labs, response papers, reaction papers, research papers, and term papers, but do you want to write more?

It's hard to imagine many among us responding enthusiastically to such a sign; however, many students do choose to write extracurricularly. Several student produced publications came out this year, including Perspective, GLIM, Spike, Small Craft Warnings, Common Speaking, and the Phoenix. Students who prefer other forms of communication participated in the wildly successful debate team, and worked for WSRN, the campus radio station.

A number of literary magazines: Small Craft Warnings, Common Speaking, Pangaea and BEM were published along with three features magazines: Perspective, GLIM, and Spike.

Perspective is devoted to in depth articles and near layouts. When students found time to read the 4000 word articles, they found them enjoyable and well-laid-out. Students who didn't have time to read the articles looked at the photo essays.

GLIM, the Garnet Literary Insiders Magazine, made its debut this year. Its goal: to seek out and publish student papers and to boldly expose students to papers in fields they had never heard of before. The magazine included papers from a variety of subjects.

Spike was a bizarre magazine that featured Haikus of Hate and photos of cats being decapitated (joke). Like Perspectives, the articles were long and involved; however, the closest it came to publishing student papers was the article in which Matt Lieberman and Erich Deiss deconstructed the social merits of a strip bar.

The Amos J Peasley Debate Society had highly successful year. Seniors Neal Pottishman and Jeremy Mallory won the North American Debate Contest for the second year in a row, and WSRN continued to broadcast 24 hours a day. Students took turns DJing shows featuring a variety of music.

Pulling another all-nighter: Eric Pakurar, Dave Augustine, and Krister Olson spend another Thursday night playing Tetris while they should be churning out an issue of The Phoenix.

Cracking from the pressure of writing his thesis and working with both Perspective and Phoenix staffs, Dave Sobel has a breakdown outside of the publications office.

(Lower right) Let the battle begin: Members of SWIL stand ready to begin a game of live chess. Players assumed the roles of chess pieces, while their shoes served as pawns.

DU and Phi Psi, the only two fraternal organizations on campus, bear the heavy burden of entertainment that is distributed among many frats at other institutions. They often sponsor parties on weekends, often professing "mixed refreshments" as a change from the ordinary party fare.

Often the brunt of many jokes, these small brotherhoods hold out through everything. Well, almost everything. This year, facing $17,000 in debt for unpaid bills, Phi Psi was forced to give up its house. Many ideas were put forward as to what to do with the building, such as a new dorm or social center, but as yet, nothing has been accepted. Be kind to the poor, homeless fraternity brothers as they huddle around their keg for warmth. Remember, it could be you.

SWIL is ostensibly a group dedicated to science-fiction and fantasy. But more than that, SWIL is a haven for people who see the world differently from the mainstream. While the group maintains two libraries of genre books, songs, etc, literature is hardly the primary focus of the organization. A lot of gaming goes on: role-playing as well as board and card games. There are a number of SWIL events and traditions: the Swiloween party, Walpurgisnacht, the annual Schlock Film Festival, Live Chess ("Come! Be a pawn in the game of life!"), and the campus-wide and wildly popular Pterodactyl Hunt. The Bug-Eyed Magazine, published yearly (at least in theory) by SWIL, is a collection of speculative writing and artwork. Recent years have seen the addition of an annual "Spamegeddon" during which everyone's favorite potted meat is abused in strange and wonderful ways.

You may wonder what our two beloved and "normal" frats have in common with the Swarthmore Warders of Imaginative Literature (SWIL), which admits to being out of the ordinary group of people. Well, it seems that the bonds of friendship, loyalty, and trust are common among these organizations. They all seek to provide a close-knit social community members by providing activities to suit the tastes of their members. Proving once again that no matter what you consider fun, be it an hour of power or an afternoon of spam throwing, there is a place for you at Swat.

Dorm Life

“We are still climbing a steep hill. We are far from the top, but we can see the top in the distance.”

Willets

Willets can claim to be the only dorm through which members of sports teams run naked WITHOUT bags on their heads or the incentive of cash (as long as they're careful not to slip on the vomit in the lounges or step on the broken beer bottles after an Hour of Power).

Conveniently located at the back door of McCabe and downhill from the Scott Arboretum, Willets houses a collection of garrulous freshmen, as well as sophomores and juniors who got screwed in the housing lottery. The residents are all bonded together in knowledge that their dorm could burn to the ground and no one would really care. The alarms were disconnected from the firehouse long ago, and the residents' usual reaction to the numerous blaring horns is to slam their doors and turn their stereos up.

Residents take pride in the laid back atmosphere and the cacophonous noise that erupts at all hours of the day and night. It's fun. They like it. They make the best of the small rooms and small closets, and spend more time out in the halls talking and getting to know each other, a lesson that many Swatties have missed out on. Plus, they get great seats for Vertigo-go shows in Mephistos.

After Pub Night on Thursdays, residents often enjoy a rousing, chorus of Bon Jovi's classic hit "Living on a Prayer" sung by many drunken revelers shouting tunelessly at the top of their lungs. Nothing like a midnight serenade to help you get to sleep before your exam the next day. This year's housing debacle ensured that sophomores living in Willets one-room doubles this year will have a Willets one-room double their junior year as well, to the envy of all their friends.

Mertz

Mertz. What can we say about Mertz? Not much. Mertz is a large building that houses many students. As is common, it has bathrooms, windows, and doors. The grand staircase in the entrance is welcoming, yet slightly intimidating; architecturally, a bold decision. The primary complaint heard about Mertz is that it is too dark. This is somewhat confusing, as Mertz does possess windows, as mentioned above. Perhaps these windows are not very big.

Mertz occupies a prime position next to Old Tarble, so residents don't have to go very far for the annual Haunted House, and they have a lovely view of the blue, um... gray mural on the wall. They are also a conveniently short walk, hobble or limp from the Health Center.

In the words of a senior much wittier than any of the writers here, "C'mon baby, Mertz so good. It's big, it's gray, it's made out of wood. C'mon baby, y'know Mertz so good."

Wharton

Everyone wants Wharton. At room choosing, seniors are bitter for not getting the single they wanted and sophomores are bitter over not getting their quad. Juniors, in general, are bitter.

But why does everyone want Wharton? There is no cinder block like the walls of Danawell and no burlap, like the lining of Mertz. Instead, residents pretend they are Clint Eastwood in The Good, The Bad and The Ugly whenever they step through the saloon doors in their CD bathroom. On a quiet night, they can hear the Blue Route humming in the distance. But really, people live in Wharton for one reason and one reason only. Wharton is the closest dormitory to Sharples.

There are the serious seniors in CD who work all the time except when they aren't. There are the first-years of AB and EF who get more sleep and of whom the seniors are envious. The juniors, regardless of which side of Wharton they're in, are bitter. In spite of this, halls are well-bonded. Everyone loves living in Wharton.

In Wharton, the lights are always on (because no one has figured out how to turn them off). The bathrooms are always clean (except the night after green bottle). And, like clockwork, every Tuesday and Thursday morning, the garbage truck makes its pick up at 5:00 a.m. To love it, live it. But keep your window closed if you like sleeping through the night.

Parrish

The convenience, beauty, and size of the rooms make Parrish a very popular place to live. Where else on campus can you find twenty-foot ceilings, huge windows, gigantic rooms and a nifty dumbwaiter. One can have a great single overlooking Parrish Beach, or a lovely view of the construction on North Campus. On any given Friday afternoon, Swatties enjoyed music pumped from speakers in windows while they relaxed on the Beach. Plus, residents have the ultimate convenience of having the mail room, deans offices, and, most importantly, the Classics department all in their building. Who could ask for anything more!

Lest one think that Parrish is the perfect place to live, it is also what some have dubbed "a towering inferno waiting to happen." What, another fire alarm?!? What time IS it, anyway? Those words were muttered numerous times by residents who thought that they were getting a great deal when they chose to live there. No less than two fires were found during the second semester alone, one dragging residents out of bed at 3 a.m.

Nevertheless, Parrish is a great place to live if you don't mind single sex halls. The residents do seem to get around regardless of the absence of members of the opposite sex. Rumors abound about who did what with whom in which classroom. Just what is that dumbwaiter used for, anyway?

Dana & Hollowell: separated at birth

Sex. Drugs. Swil. Overflowing toilets. Cinder blocks. This is Danawell. Lurking on the fringe of campus, Danawell gives its residents the feeling of living both on and off campus. Located just upwind, er, uphill from the Crum, Danawell offers close contact with the local fauna (oh boy, more !@#$$% squirrels and chipmunks). The first rthing that these twin dorms bring to mind is "What the hell were they thinking?"

Like many of the buildings on this campus, Danawell is rumored to have been designed by a prison architect. The purpose of its twisted halls was to limit prisoner interaction and suppress rioting. Judging by the activities of the residents, it appears that this tactic was unsuccessful. Setting numerous false fire alarms and wild, naked dashes into the muddy waters of the Crum are only some of the pastimes that Danawell residents engage in.

However, one must not neglect the benefits of Danawell's, um, unique architecture. Where else can you eavesdrop on your hallmates by simply opening your door and listening to gossip echo down the hall into your room? Of course, it's often difficult to block out the things that you don't want to hear...

There is inevitably one, two or ten residents who come back too inebriated to figure out which dorm is Dana and which is Hollowell (my room was here this morning, I swear!). Not to mention the constant challenge of not bumping into those crooked cinder block walls when sleepy or running. But those twisting cinder block hallways also provide a great place to hang out and talk with hallmates, at least, whenever the toilets aren't overflowing.

There's simply no place like Dana. Except, of course, Hollowell.

Lodges, Worth & Woolman

These three dormitories remain among the most esoteric on campus, approaching the likes of PPR and ML. Worth and the Lodges are enticingly unique in their Gothic architecture, which looks like it is straight out of the sixteenth century. That is, until you see the piles of beer bottles from the fairly regular Thursday night parties, and the Christmas lights left up all semester. The lodges provide prime living space for people who can find four others to block with, which usually means the football and men's rugby teams. Worth offers very nice apartment-style rooms with wood floors which are generally for Seniors and Juniors and the occasional Sophomore. Unfortunately, Worthstock could not be held this past year due to rain.

Woolman keeps pretty much to itself. It offers spacious rooms for women who prefer the quiet, off campus feel, and for those who want a temporary escape from Swarthmore men. Though Parrish houses men and women on separate halls, Woolman is the only Swarthmore dorm reserved for single sex living.

Palmer, Pittenger, & Roberts

You knew it was going to happen when Nirvana went Top 10, your eight-year-old sister pierced her nose, and grandma traded in her orthopedic shoes for Doc Martens. It was unavoidable. PPR has gone mainstream.

Things have changed out here in what were formerly the "alternative" dorms. Palmer, Pittenger, and Roberts residents have exchanged their whips and handcuffs for lacrosse sticks and protective gear. The hard beats of Nine Inch Nails and the Beastie Boys that used to resound in these halls has been replaced by sounds of the Grateful Dead and Eric Clapton wafting through the corridors. And the freshly scrubbed bodies crowned with sun-bleached hair and athletic laurels now far out number the black clothed beings that only used to emerge from PPR at night.

PPR's reputation for being on the fringe of Swarthmore society is now only geographically true. All types of people are now seen traipsing through the tunnel and strolling across the soccer field to reach their rooms. PPR has become a microcosm for Swarthmore College.

One thing, however, never changes in PPR. The one stabilizing force that joins our little community together is always constant: the reputation of our drug scene. The Grateful Dead is surely not the only thing that is rumored to waft through the corridors. All things must eventually change, even in PPR, but like sands through the hourglass, these are still the Drugs of Our Lives.

Mary Lyon

There are days when those who live in Mary Lyon love the walk to and from campus. Those days when red and yellow leaves crunch underfoot and pile up beneath the trees. Those days when the sun is bright and a warm spring breeze fills the air. And then, there is the rest of the year. Those icy cold days when paths become long, narrow skating rinks. Those busy days when leaving campus at 3 am means that it will still be another fifteen or twenty minutes before they can go to bed.

However, none of the drawbacks of ML life--The fifteen-minute hike to campus, the water which runs cold more often than hot, the knocking of the radiator gnomes at 5:00A.M.--seem to deter the residents from enjoying the dorm which lies off the beaten path. Maybe it's the feeling of dorm identity, the frontiersman's spirit, or the thrill of private bathrooms, but each year ML is filled with brave people, prepared to march through the snows of winter.

Because ML is off-campus, it allows those who live there to feel perhaps a bit more in touch with real life outside of Swat (we're positive it does exist). It is not a place for those who have trouble making it to class on time. The entire mystique that surrounds the dorm (so the other ML buildings all burned down?) and the famous Halloween party are just part of the lure of Mary Lyon.

(Lower right) Kristen Schwind demonstrates how terribly exciting graham crackers can be, contrary to what the abnormal psych textbook says.

from "A Psalm of Life"

Lives of great men all remind us

We can make our lives sublime,

And, departing, leave behind us

Footprints on the sands of time;

Footprints, that perhaps another,

Sailing o'er life's solemn main,

A forlorn and shipwrecked brother,

Seeing, shall take heart again.

Henry Wadsworth Longfellow

CONGRATULATIONS CHAD!

WE LOVE YOU DEARLY AND WISH YOU
SUCCESS AS YOU CONTINUE YOUR EDUCATION AND PREPARE FOR YOUR CAREER IN MEDICINE.

LOVE ALWAYS,
MOM, DAD, AMY,
AND KATIE

Dear Douglas,

You are off and running

With a good start

You have the stamina

And you have the heart

The World is your oyster

So take a bite

If your vegetarian commitment

Say it's alright!

Love

D&M&M

...And on top of everything else, Neal, you are a wonderful human being

All Our love,
Mom, Dad, Joel, Dave
(and of course, Munya)

CONGRATULATIONS ON YOUR GRADUATION!

When you find yourself seeking a spiritual home, consider that Unitarian Universalism emphasizes:

The inherent worth and dignity of every person

Justice, equity and compassion

A free and responsible search for truth and meaning

Respect for the interdependent web of all existence.

Surprised by joy-- Impatient as the wind--

E. V. H.

YOU'VE COME A LONG WAY, BABY

CONGRATULATIONS
AND LOVE

MOM, DAD, CHARLOTTE, PAUL, KARIN, LAURA AND ERIKA.

Thoughts for a day in May:

- What can I know? What ought I do? What may I hope? (I. Kant)
- Sacred cows make the tastiest hamburgers. (A. Hoffman)
- Lord, won't you buy me a Mercedes-Benz,
My friends all drive Porsches--
I must make amends-- (J. Joplin)
- Guided by my heritage of a love of beauty and a respect for strength--in search of my mother's garden, I found my own.
(A. Walker)

Congratulations, Laura!

We're so proud of you and your achievements.

Best wishes for future happiness and success to you and all your friends at

To Sam: Looking back and looking forward. . .

Be careful what you wish for, you might just get it.

-Stephen King

Understanding others is knowledge,
Understanding oneself is enlightenment:
Conquering others is power,
Conquering oneself is strength;
Contentment is wealth,
Forceful conduct is willfulness;
Not losing one's rightful place is to endure
To die but not be forgotten is longevity.

-Lao Tzu, 77 (33)

Love, Ned

I've often been told that you only can do what you know how to do well and that's be you. Be what you're like. Be like your self.

Let us contemplate our forefathers, and posterity, and resolve to maintain the rights bequeathed to us from the former, for the sake of the latter.

-Sam Adams (1771)

Now to what higher object, to what greater character, can any mortal aspire than to be possessed of all this knowledge, well digested and ready at command, to assist the feeble and friendless, to discountenance the haughty and lawless, to procure redress of wrongs, the advancement of right, to assert and maintain liberty and virtue, to die with courage and abolish tyranny and vice?

-John Adams (1759)

No pessimist ever discovered the secrets of the stars, or sailed to an uncharted land, or opened a new heaven to the human spirit.

From the desk of the editor...

The Halcyon is the largest publication at Swarthmore. The 1995 edition contains a record 304 pages and was expanded to include an entire section on Dorm Life, which we felt was an integral part of the Swat experience. We tried to caption all of the pictures and explain things where necessary so this book would be an even more complete memoir of this year. We hope that these changes are well received and enhance the depiction of Swarthmore provided in the Halcyon.

Most people are unaware of the process of creating a publication the size of the Halcyon, thus they often do not fully appreciate the immense value and beauty of their yearbook. Countless hours of effort along with a great deal of blood, sweat, and tears went into the making of this book. Those of us who worked on it hoped and prayed that we were doing it right and then eventually we just hoped and prayed that we would actually finish it. Terrill Johnston, Ben Salter, and I stayed on campus long after finals were over and barricaded ourselves in the publications office on the FIFTH FLOOR of Parrish. We worked diligently despite the fact that 300 seniors were having the greatest week of their lives, on the most beautiful campus in the world, at the best time of the year. This book exists largely because of their effort, support, and unending patience with me as I lost touch with all reality and babbled to myself wondering why I was being forced to endure this hell, and on the FIFTH FLOOR no less... but I digress. What we did not finish I brought home with me. Thus, I apologize for the lack of captions in the sports section and any blanks which you may encounter in the book.

There are many people who contributed in various ways to the making of this book. Most of them lived on my hall and were sucked in against their will. Thank you all for being willing to help! All of the artwork in this book was produced by Lou Peterson who even drew during finals just to help us out. We really, really, really appreciate it Lou, and your work is great! Also, thanks to Fernando Chang-Muy our advisor, Kate Downing for the photos, Mike Gilroy and Pat at Gilroy and Associates, and Mike and Valerie at Carl Wolf Studios. A special thanks to the professional photography of Steven Goldblatt, Scott Cowger, and John Ferco.

So this is it. We're all very proud of it and we sincerely hope that you like it. We tried to be amusing when possible and not too sappy. By the way, the feet were a whim. I just liked them. Hope you've enjoyed the yearbook.
